Campaign update

Prepared by Ben Hale
7 January 2011

Queensland Prawns

Queensland Prawns is a joint campaign between the QSMA and the APFA aimed at encouraging Queenslanders to choose locally produced prawns and consume them more often.

Using a website, Facebook page, Youtube and Twitter the campaign is a 12 month program which will end on May 1 2011.

October - December 2010

The peak period

The Queensland Prawn campaign broadened its reach throughout the last quarter, with a steady growth of fans and interactions on Facebook and a huge jump in online traffic to the Queensland Prawns website. Obviously Christmas is the peak period for prawn sales, and Queensland was affected by shortages and this made news all over the state. While there were plenty of prawns in the North, the South East saw less quantity available. This fact drew plenty of comment on Facebook, and the Queensland Prawns website saw dramatic increases in traffic from people looking for recipes and information on buying, storing and peeling prawns. In particular the site was relied on heavily for people looking for places to buy prawns.

Headline numbers.

Queensland Prawns now has over 5,000 Facebook fans (5,129 as at Jan 8th). The discussions occurring on the page are lengthy, passionate and involved.

The Queensland Prawns website saw a huge lift in traffic in December, peaking just before Christmas on December 23rd as people looked to us for solid information on ways to get the best out of their Christmas prawns.

From October - December the Queensland Prawns website received 3,332 visits and 6,879 page views. 267 alone were on Dec 23rd.

The Youtube video for Eat Queensland Prawns on Qld day has been viewed 2,751 times.

Where to from here?

With 4 months left of the campaign, we are well positioned to start our planning for Eat Queensland Prawns on Qld Day 2011. The momentum we have built with Facebook and our fans means we can really reach a large audience with our messages.

The seasonal factor couldn't be highlighted more obviously. When it's Christmas, people are thinking about prawns. The upward trend starting in early December is also a result of a campaign of Google Adwords (paid text ads running on Google search results) suddenly becoming quite active. What these figures show is the dramatic effect a change of creative and keyword selection can create. Prior to November we asked Google to serve up our little text ads whenever people searched for a range of about 50 different keywords including “prawns”, “prawn recipes” etc. In November we added another 50 or so keywords bringing our range of keywords up to 119 combinations, and that is when the traffic started to explode. On the following page is the list of the top performing Google Adwords. Please note - Google sends traffic to our site in 2 ways, organic search and paid search. Our page was served up in organic search with a mind-boggling 1349 different keyword combinations (a full list is supplied at the end of this report). It may come as no surprise that the recipe page is the most popular. The page identified as “/” and “index” is the bananaprawns home page. (Ranked 4th and 11th - these numbers should be combined, but the total still ranks the home page as 4th)

Very interestingly, the second most popular page was the “where to buy” page - people spent an average of 2.5 mins on that page, and that page alone was viewed 97 times on December 23rd, indicating to us that the site is being used by people to not only get to know about prawns, but also as a resource to find retailers - very encouraging as this is a direct link between our activity and prawn sales.

Facebook.

What can we say about Facebook? It is a complete juggernaut.

Our fan base continues to grow as we run our ads asking people to “like” Queensland Prawns. The conversations continue to get more involved, passionate and a real community is developing. A side effect of all this activity is that we also then receive a lot of free traffic to the Queensland Prawns site as people click through from Facebook.

Another very exciting development is that because we have such a large fan base, we are getting people to like us because they see a friend of theirs likes us, and these clicks start building upon themselves.

There are also a lot of industry people chiming in with their opinions on issues. We stopped running our ads for a few days, and still our fan base was increasing (albeit slowly) from this critical social mass that had developed.

Sometimes exchanges get quite heated, as of course no-one agrees on everything. One of these exchanges generated a complaint, but it was more about a technical issue from someone who did not know how to unsubscribe from the Queensland Prawns Facebook page. The positive comments though far outweigh the negative.

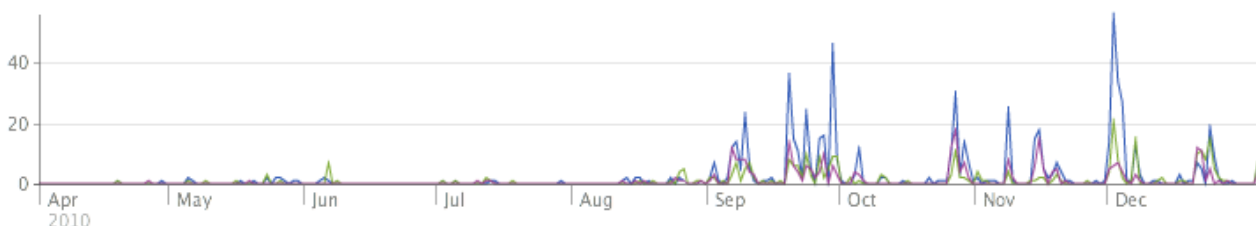

At the time of writing, another heated exchange was underway. Click here to view.

While there have been people participating in conversations, there have been literally tens of thousands eavesdropping in on them. The most popular post, asking people if they saw a report on A Current Affair about prawns appeared in over 10,000 news feeds. Facebook is and continues to be a major part of the Queensland Prawns promotion.

Holy Cow!

Summary.

Queensland Prawn's campaign picked up traffic and visibility exponentially over the October - December period. The combination of a website filled with interesting meaningful content, a carefully curated and promoted Facebook page, and a reinvigorated Google Adwords campaign meant that the numbers to both the website and Facebook page were boosted considerably.

This popularity on Facebook should be harnessed in the upcoming months to begin the groundswell for Eat Queensland Prawns on Queensland Day 2011.

Serious consideration should be given to creating not just an "event" on Facebook, but real events around the state during Queensland Week. Although that is outside the scope of this campaign, if there were such events to promote, then the existing campaign infrastructure can be used to drive attendance to such events.

We will continue to grow our fan base, keep the conversation active on Facebook and adapt and update our website content to keep the campaign fresh and interesting.
